SUPPORT IN DEALING WITH TRAUMATIC EVENTS

Traumatic events come in many different forms, including natural disasters like floods or wildfires and man-made crises such as shootings or other violence. There isn't a usual or normal response to these situations. Something that barely makes an impression on one person may leave another person reeling. Symptoms of trauma may include physical, mental, and behavioral responses – either at the time of the event or much later.

If you notice any of these symptoms in yourself, your family members, or your coworkers during or after a crisis, Humana can help.

Humana's Community Response Line connects you and your community to EAP professionals and Work-Life Service specialists available to support anyone in need through a toll-free number. This 24/7 service will evaluate a caller's needs, then refer them to local community resources or mental health services.

Call the free, confidential Humana Community Response Line at 888-673-1154.
